GREAT PUMPKIN CASE

Methodist Brotherhood Gave Entertainment and Mock Trial. The Brotherhood of Grace Methodist Episcopal church gave a very successful entertainment at the Colonial on Friday evening, successful not only in the general merit of the performance but also in the audience which was large and enthusiastic. The first part of the program consisted of musical numbers by the church orchestra, the male quartet, readings by Mrs. B. E. Doyle, vocal solos by W. B. Atwood with Miss Eugenia Scott as accompanist and violin obligato by Percy E. Welch, cornet solo by H. P. Coakley with Miss Eugenia Scott at the piano, violin solo by Mr. Welch with Mrs. R. T. Parker accompanist, and a vocal duet, R. T. Parker and W. B. Atwood. The quartet consisted of R. T. Parker, W. B. Atwood, Ernest Skinner and Birney L. Hall, George R. Bollinger being detained out of town.

The second part of the program consisted of a mock trial, "The Great Pumpkin Case of Guff vs. Muff," and was a ridiculous burlesque of court procedure. The trial was caused by a pumpkin vine which had grown through a fence into a neighbor's cornfield and there produced some marvelous fruit of a size and quality very different from the pumpkins produced on the given hills of Vermont.

The owner of the vine and the man on whose land the vine has produced the pumpkins agree to divide the fortune which the three pumpkins will bring but fate in the form of a cow destroys the pumpkins and as a result Neighbor Guff sues Neighbor Muff for damages resulting from "contributory negligence." The trial abounded in funny situations and everyone who took part endeavored to make the whole production as ridiculous as possible.
